Fighter A

NOTE: The assembly guide for these plastic figures are for reference only. You can explore other combinations to create your own pose creatively.

2

Fighter B

FACTS: Beginning in 1960s, vast quantities of obsolete and redundant SKS Rifles were donated by Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China to left-wing guerrilla movements. SKS rifles served as one of the primary arms of the Viet Cong during the Vietnam War.

Fighter C

FACTS: Chinese support for Democratic Republic of Vietnam before the mid-1960s meant that Type-56 Assault Rifles were frequently encountered by the American Soldiers in the hands of either Viet Cong guerrillas or PAVN soldiers during the Vietnam War. These rifles were discovered far more often than the original Russian-made AK-47 assault rifles.

Fighter D

5

Fighter E

Fighter F

FACTS: The RPG-7 rocket-propelled grenade launcher was first encountered by the US in Vietnam in late 1967. The RPG-7 proved to be effective against American M48A3 tanks in Vietnam. It could also penetrate bunkers, masonry buildings, and other fortifications with lethal terminal effects. It is a formidable weapon even in the hands of the most unskilled Viet Cong.

Fighter G

Fighter H

FACTS: Many Viet Cong operatives often disguised as farmers hiding within the rice farming villages, making it difficult for American soldiers to identify. Female operatives did participate in ambushes and often handled a lot of the back-end operations. For example, food, supplies, burying the dead.

9

Fighter I

10

Fighter J

FACTS: The K-50M is a Vietnamese-made submachine gun produced between 1958 and 1964, based on the Type 50s supplied by China during the Vietnam War.

Squad Leader

Signal Communicator

FACTS: The Viet Cong followed their established communications procedures so rigorously that ambush forces were known to allow their targets to pass unscathed because wiremen had not yet completed linking every ambush position. Only after an attack or ambush started were Viet Cong communicators permitted to use radios.
